An application when installed on a device or on an emulator will install at: /data/data/APP PACKAGE NAME The APK itself is placed in the /data/app/ folder. These paths, however, are in the System Partition and to access them, you will need to have root. This is for a device. On the emulator, you can see it in your logcat (DDMS) in the File Explorer tab. By the way, it only shows the package name that is defined in your Manifest.XML under the package="APP PACKAGE NAME" attribute. Any other packages you may have created in your project in Eclipse do not show up here. I have installed a few Android applications both with the adb install MyApplication.apk command and via a webserver (as an alternative to Android Market). But where in the Android file system on my phone is the MyApplication.apk file placed? Are applications installed with adb install not placed in the same directory as applications downloaded from the Market? I found some applications on /system/app but I can't recognize them as some downloaded from Android Market or the one I have installed with adb install. Where on the system are applications that I have installed located? My phone is not rooted, and I am running Nexus One with Android 2.2.1. 1 1 Open your Nexus One with Android's Settings. It's the or icon that's usually on the home screen or in the app drawer. 2 Scroll down and tap Apps. This displays a list of apps on your phone or tablet. If you're using a Samsung Galaxy, you may have to tap Applications and/or Applications Manager to view the apps list.[1] Advertisement 3 Refine the list of apps. If you can't find what you're looking for, you can choose to see only certain types of apps in this list. To view apps that are enabled or disabled, tap the downward-pointing arrow at the top of the screen. Tap Enabled to view only apps that can run on your Android, or Disabled to see those that have been turned off. To hide the system apps, tap i at the top-right of the screen, then tap Hide System. Now you'll only see apps that didn't come with your Android. Advertisement Add New Question Question Why is there a pop-up that says "Verified by Play Protect"? Play Protect is a feature in Google Play that verifies the integrity of the apps you install. It looks for things such as viruses and malware, and deals with them accordingly. Beginning with API Level 8, you can allow your application to be installed on the external storage (for example, the device's SD card). This is an optional feature you can declare for your application with the android:installLocation manifest attribute. If you do not declare this attribute, your application will be installed on the internal storage only and it cannot be moved to the external storage. To allow the system to install your application on the external storage, modify your manifest file to include the android:installLocation attribute in the element, with a value of either "preferExternal" or "auto".
